

Questions & Answers on Legally Accessing Medical Cannabis in Canada

With the proliferation of marijuana dispensaries across the country, it's important to realize that only companies that have been licensed and authorized by Health Canada are legally approved to produce and sell medical cannabis products. These Licensed Producers follow strict production standards and safety measures in order to ensure quality and protect patients.

Be sure to always protect yourself by verifying the source of your medicine and understanding the consequences of procuring medical cannabis from an unauthorized and illegal source.

1. How and where can I legally obtain medical cannabis?

Licensed Producers (LP's) authorized by Health Canada are currently the only legal source of cannabis for patients across Canada. Here is an up-to-date list of all of the current LP's - www.hc-sc.gc.ca/dhp-mps/marihuana/info/list-eng.php.

In order to obtain medical cannabis in Canada, the first step is to meet with your doctor. Your doctor will then be required to complete a Medical Document (http://delta9.ca/forms/Delta9_MedicalDocument.pdf). Once your doctor has completed this Medical Document, you can complete our Application Form (http://delta9.ca/forms/Delta9_ApplicationForm.pdf) and register with Delta 9 as a patient. You can then place an order through our Patient Portal or by telephone from one of our knowledgeable and friendly Customer Care Team Specialists.

Direct and discreet delivery through a Licensed Producer, via secure mail order or courier, is the only legal procurement method currently available in Canada.

There are currently NO other legal suppliers of medical cannabis in Canada.

2. How do I know I am getting a safe, quality product?

Licensed Producers regulate products for safety & quality in the following ways:

- Medical cannabis is cultivated according to Good Production Practices (GPP) and subjected to regular and rigorous government quality and regulatory audits.
- Cannabinoid levels of THC and CBD are tested for accuracy in each and every product.
- Testing for impurities (e.g. fungus, bacteria, and heavy metals) is conducted to guarantee safety of all cannabis products.

- Packaging and labelling must conform to strict regulations and all cannabis products are sold in child-resistant containers.

With all other illegal Suppliers, the source of the product and its contents and safety, are unknown and unregulated.

3. How do I protect myself when buying medical cannabis?

Licensed Producers offer their patients full protection in the following ways:

- Proof of legal possession is provided by Delta 9 and our patients can therefore travel within Canada with their medication.
- Delta 9 patients can consult with our knowledgeable and friendly Customer Care Team regarding product information and efficacy.
- Delta 9 patients are protected by Health Canada quality regulations including a product recall mechanism in case of potential harmful product issues.
- Medical cannabis from Delta 9 is a claimable medical expense on your personal federal tax return. Consult with your accountant to determine your eligible deductions for the total amount spent on your medicine each and every calendar year.

With all other illegal Suppliers, patients are NOT legally protected if stopped by police, there is NO recall mechanism to protect them in the event of product impurities and their medical cannabis expenses are NOT tax deductible.
